LATEST DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WHARTON POISONING CASE.

The Widew in Jail-Her Health and Demeanor-Devotion of her Daughter-Doubts of the Guilt of the

[From the Baltimore Sun.] The recent developments in the poisoning case, in which Mrs. Elizabeth G. Wharton appears as the principal actor, continues to engross public attention, and yesterday there were rumors afoat concerning the accused, of her death, suicide, &c., all of which proved to be without the least foundation in fact. Witha desire to pander to the morbid appetite of the curious in such matters, a reporter sent on expressly by a New York journal yesterday morning waited on Warden Trvin, and seemed to be perfectly astonished when told it would be impossible to see the prisoner. He, however, contented himself with viewing the prison, interviewing all who came in his way, (among others Dr. McSherry,) in reference to the physical condition of viewing the prison, interviewing air who came in his way, (among others Dr. McSherry,) in reference to the physical condition of Mrs. Wharton, &c. On being introduced to Fred. Pincaney, Esq., assistant State attorney, who called at the prison on business, the New Yorker innocently attempted to "interview" that distinguished and venerable officer, but he soon ascertained that the "interview busisiness" would not go as well hore as in New York, where newspapers seem to rely so much upon fresh sensation every day. After dining with the warden, the New York reporter left apparently pleased with his visit and the courtesy of the officers of the law.

In regard to Mrs. Wharton, it is understood that, although she appeared well acd cheerful on Saturday, she had been very ill the Friday night preceding at her residence, having been attacked with an epileptic fit, to which she is said to be snoject. On reaching the jail she was smade ready. This cell is on the first tier was made ready. This cell is on the first tier with her friends into the cent settle first tier was made ready. This cell is on the first tier facing west, No. 167, immediately adjoining that of the matron, and next to the one occuthat of the matron, and next to the one occupied by Mrs. Marsh, who, it will be recollected, slaughtered fier three children on Central avenue whilst insane, and who is now, by order of the Criminal Court, confined in the Maryland Hospital. She has never recovered her reason since that fatal calamity. The cell of Mrs. Wharton is turnished as plainly as possible, she having been allowed to have sent from her dwelling one bedstead, bed, washstand, chairs, &c. Over the grazing of the door of her cell hangs a lace curtain, which excludes the occupants from the idle gaze of passers along the corr for. Miss Wharton, the daughter, has been allowed to remain with her mother.

On Saturday night Mrs. Wharton was restless, but on Sunday remarked to the warden

Sunday night, and both on that day and yesterday had a good appetite, the meals for herself and dauguter being sent from the restaurant of Mrs. Bussell, on Madison street, near Estaw. It may be proper to state that all nnconvicted prisoners in the jatt enjoy this privilege of procuring their meals from the butside, and Mrs. Whatton has availed herself of it.

Miss Nellie Wharton appears to be devotedly attached to her mother, and does not leave her except occasionally to get the air in the corridor. The officers state that although cheerful and lively in the cell with her parent, she is invariably seen in tears when out of her mother's presence. Warden Irvin, knowing that close confinement in the cell would be anything but conducive to health, particularly to a young person, last evening suggested to anything but conducte to neath, particularly to a young person, last evening suggested to Miss Wharton the propriety of using the jail enclosure for her waks, where she might inhale the pure air of the flowers and shrubbery. She thanked him very kindly, but remarked that she knew her mother could not accompany her, and therefore she must decline. The warden allows no one to intrude upon pany her, and therefore she must decline.

The warden allows no one to intrude upon Mrs. Wharton, and no visitors are admitted to her unless by express permission of the board of visitors of the institution, and the curious who may visit the jail with the expectation of seeing her unauthorized, will be disappointed. Yesterday she had a lengthy interview with Messrs. Steele and Thomas, her counsel, and afterwards the Rev. Mr. Converse, of Grace Eniscopal Church, spent an hour in her cell. Episcopal Church, spent an hour in her cell. Several officers of the army, personal friends of the late Major Wharton, and a member of the legal profession from Washington, also called at the jall to see her, but were only allowed to send up their cards.

Dr. B. McSherry, Mrs. Wharton's family physician, in company with Dr. Jacob Houck, the physician to the jail, visited the prisoner late last evening, when she appeared to be not so well as during the pay, and the former expressed fears that she might have an epileptic attack during the night. Whatever degree of crime may attack to the accused, it is evident that she has many warm, sympathetic friends in the community, especially among those of her own sex. It has been stated already that the voice of the grand jury on the presentment in her case was not unanimous; now fit is stated that the vote was fifteen in favor of finding the presentment, and seven against it.

THE PRINCE OF WALES ON THE BAT-TLE OF DORKING.

The Prince of Wales, supported by Prince Arthur and the Duke of Cambridge, and other distinguished persons, presided at the annual festival dinner of the Royal Calcdonian Asylum, which took place at the Freemasons' Tayerr, London.

The Prince of Wales, in proposing "The Army, Navy and Reserve Forces," said: "I am sure that every Englishman and every Sootchman, being proud of our army, navy and reserve forces, will duly honor this toast. Much has been said lately respecting changes that are to be made in the army of this country. Now, whatever the nature of those changes may be let us trust that, at any rate, they will be conductive to the good of the army and to the safety of the country. Much has also been said, I dare say, about the subject of a certain publication, which, doubtless, everybody in this room has seen—I mean the Battle of Dorking." The only remark I will venture to make is that I sincerely trust that the prophecy to which that publication gives expression will never be realized. Still there was an object in writing that little book, that object being to give a broad hint to still there was an object in writing that little book, that object being to give a broad hint to all of us that we must not be found napping, and I believe if we will but take that hint and give to our defensive forces the attention they deserve, the prophecy will never be realized. I have great pleasure in proposing this toas, and in counling the first branch of it with the name of my illustrious relative, the commander-in-chief. I have much pleasure in coupling with the navy the name of so gallant an office. Admiral Sir Alexander Mine, and in coupling with the reserve forces the name of attention to the volunteer movement, and who, we must not forget, took so active a part in promoting the fund for the relief of the sick and wounded in the late war."

The Duke of Cambridge, in responding, remarked that he had had the honor for many years of having been, under the lavor of his sovereign, and he trusted with the confidence of the country, at the head of the noble profession with which all his life had been so intimately associated. He cordially echoed the wish which had been expressed by his Royal Highness, the chairman, that the future of the army might be such as to do honor to the country and credit to itself. In its past history the army had always deserved the good opinion of the country, and in spite of the experience of recent events acroad he must express his belief that our army was equal to the performance of any duties it could be called upon to discharge, and that the "Battle of Dorking," if ever it should have to be fought, would have an issue far different from that which its pleasant author had predicted. that which its pleasant author had predicted. It would, indeed, be greatly to be deplored if ever the time should come when the people of England were unable to detend their hearths and their homes from the insults of a foreign

On Monday last, says the Intelligencer, during the prevalence of a thunder storm, an old colored man, named King, was discovered near the railroad, upon the plantation or Dr. U.R. The doctor ordered some colored people to ascertain what was the matter with him, and olthough they proceeded in that direction, afterwards returned to the house without executing the command. Upon being asked, King said that some one had shot at him, and that the powder burnt his face. The truth is, he had received a severe shock from lightning, and concluded that the Ku. Kinx were after him! From the same paper we also copy the following account of a disastrous fire: "We regret to learn that our friend, Mr. P. L. His dwelling caught fire about three o'clock in the afternoon of that day, and was totally consumed, besides the furniture, the clothing of the family, and several hundred dollars in greenbacks, making a total loss of dollars in greenbacks, making a total loss of about $2500. The Southerner says: "The hot term of the season seems to have ended on Tuesday evening, as the atmosphere became quite cool from the southerly winds, and heavy rain clouds that reached half way around the horizon on the southerly side of town, but no rain came to the courthouse. On Wednesday a cool breeze was left all day from the same-quarter, and still no rain, and up to the hour of quarter, and still no rain, and up to the nour of going to press the drought continues. Corn is severely injured in the neighborhood of this place, but we are glad to know that there will be an abundance made in the county, as the crops made on Lynche's Greek, to say nothing of the Timmonsville neighborhood and several other localities, will supply all deficiencies."

A fine rain visited this section on Tuesday last, says the Intelligencer, and several partial rains are reported in some localities during the past week. The rain on Tuesday will prove highly beneficial to the corn crop, which had begun to suffer from the 16t, dry weather. The cotton crop still promises well. Altogether the prospect in this county is highly encouraging.

THE MANUFACTURE OF CREDIT.

ST. LOUIS, July 21. St. Louis, July 21.

The case of Muttier vs. Shepherd, manager of Bradstreet's Commercial Agency, was before the Circuit Court yesterday, the hearing being on motion of defendant to dissolve the injunction granted a lew days ago enjoining the circulation of the July number of Bradstreet's Commercial Reports, on the ground of false and injurious rating of the plaintiff. Several witnesses testfled to the solvency of Muttier, his Lusiness qualifications, integrity, &c., also that he is doing a large and prosperous business. King, formerly in the agency, testified to the mode of transacting business testified to the mode of transacting business at the agency. A book called the black-book was kept in which all uniavorable reports were copied; every one in the office had access to this book. A BROADSIDE FROM HORACE

THE TRIBUNE PHILOSOPHER ON "THE THIEVING CARPET-BAGGERSA!

Mr. Greeley Appeals to the Southern Republicans to "Send these Villains to the Rear!" In the leading article in the New York Trinune, of Wednesday, Horace Greeley pays his espects in his characteristic style to "the Thieving Carpet-baggers." After explaining that his denunciation is not intended for all who might be termed "carpet-baggers," many of whom are useful and valued citizens of the South, Mr. Greeley proceeds :

But there are "carpet-baggers" who are knaves and hypocrites—who, making loud protessions of zeal for Republican ascendency and negro enfranchisement and elevation, are mainly intent on filling their own pockets, from the spoil of an impoverished, unthritty, people. And this kind of "carpet-baggers" have been prominent and powerful intinger-islation and administration of several forther States, as their bloated public expenditure, travation and indebtedness abundantly deplo-States, as their bloated public expenditure, taxation and indebtedness abundantly deplorably attest. Such is the naked trust, exeggerated very naturally, by partisan exility and bitterness, but bad enough when educed to its real dimensions.

* * L'is the simple truth that our worst impressions of that sort of "carpet-baggers" were made by the statements not of Democrats at all, but of zealous Republicans. One of them was himself a recent, emigrant from Illinois, who never voted any other than a Republican ticket, but who went South to plant cotton, and declared himself nearly plant cotton, and declared himself nearly roined by the heavy taxes imposed on his plantation by the "carpet-baggers," who, by plantation by the carpet-baggers, who symansging the negroes, ruled and robbed his county, continually pusting up-swindling jobs of bridge-building, &c., to fill their own pockets. Another was our friend of many years who last fall headed the Republican Scate ticket in Louisiana, and was elected by an overwhelming majority. We take the liberty of indicating him without asking leave, be-cause the fact that he is making a determined fight as auditor against the robbers who would gladly ruin the credit, as they have absorbed the funds, of the State, is so widely known that he cannot, if he would, conceal the truth that he cannot, if he would, content the tath that he is a natural enemy of thieves. So in Texas we heard more to the prejudice of rascally carpet baggers from Republicans than from Democrats. Had we heard nothing at all, the public records and financial exhibits of several Southern States bear testimony that cannot be misunderstood nor explained that cannot be misunderstood for explained away.

The gross perversions and angry criticisms of certain Southern Republican journals reminds us of an anecdote: The eccentric Lorenzo Dow was once approaching a place where he had an appointment to breach, when a stranger complained to him that his watch had been stolen from under his pillow the night before. Dow assured the victim thin his watch would be returned, and, picking up a boulder that weighed a pound or so, hid it under his cloak and entered the pulpit. Afterpreaching zealously for half an hour or so, he suddenly stopped and exclaimed, "A man's watch was stolen in this neighborhood last night, and the thief is now in this house. I shall hit him with this stone!" He made a feint of throwing it, and one of the audience eint of throwing it, and one of the audience ducked his head. He was instantly seized, searched, and the stolen watch found in one

DARING HIGHWAY ROBBERIES:

an Edgefield Gentleman Victimized-Attempt to Rob the Mail.

The Augusta Chronicle says:

On Thursday morning Mr. John Clarke, a resident of Beach Island, started to Augusta on horseback. While I ding along a lonely by-path, a negro, armed with a pistol, sprang from the bushes, and, levelling the weapon at him, demanded his money. Unable to resist the appeal, Mr. Clarke surrendered the small amount of money which he had in his pocket. He waited until the highwayman had disappeared, and then returning home, armed himselt, raised a posse of men, and started in pursuit of the bold robber. The party went in different directions, and one of the number, Mr. Page, took the road to Sand Bar Ferry. Just as he came in sight the fugitive was about to enter the ferry boat, but, catching a glimpse of the pursuer, he fied up the river and made his escape. A negro named Lewis Cook, who is charged with being implicated in the affair, was arrested and carried to Hamburg, where a warrant was issued The Augusta Chronicle says: ried to Hamburg, where a warrant was issue

Mr. D. B. Thompson has a contract for carrying the mail between Augusta and Calhoun's Mills, in South Carolina, a good many miles distant. On Wednesday morning the mail-rider, a young man named Rich, left Calhoun's Mills on one of his regular trips. About one o'clock in the afternoch he reached Rocky. Pond, twenty miles from here. While riding up a hill in a part of the road remote from any house, two men sprung from the bushes and commanded him to halt, one of them at the same time firing at him with a pistol. The ball fortunately missed its aim, and before they could shoot again Mr. Rich drew his pistol and fred at them several times. Astonished at meeting with such, a warm reception where they expected to find an easy conquest and a rich booty, the cowardly highwaymen betook them selves to flight and ran into the woods. Mr. Rich then continued his journey unmolested, and reached the city in safety. One of the party who attacked him was a white man, the other was a negro. It was evident that their intention was to murder the mail-rider, and then carry the mail into the woods and rife the pouches at their leisure. rider and rob the government mail. .

A SERIOUS RIOT.

New York, July 21.

A riot occurred at Unuet, on the Erie Road, between the Irish and German laborers. The Irish picked a quarrel in a lager beer saloon, from which they drove the proprietor and family. Subsequently two Irish laborers were terribly beaten by Germans, one named Ryan, possibly fatal. The Irish again attacked the lager beer saloon with clubs and stones, and were raplied to by the Germans with repeated volleys from shot guns. The Irish beat a retreat. Patrick McMahon was shot in several places, but not necessarily fatal. Isaac Cullen was shot in twenty-six places; his recovery is doubtful. Martin Geogehan was shot two or three times and severely clubbed. It is not known how many others are injured.

—A Troy firm has recently received an order from South America for sixteen slabs of bell metal to weigh one hundred pounds each. On one of the peaks of the Andes a house of worship has been erected by some monks, and it has been determined to place a bell weighing sixteen hundred pounds in the turret. To transport an article of that weight up the narrow bridle paths that lead to the temple in the clouds would be impossible: so the monks clouds would be impossible; so the monks have ordered the material in slabs, and intend to build a furnace on the mountain and cast the bell themselves.

—A curious and not insignificant fact is developed by the books of the internal revenue office. These show, by the orders for lager beer stamps, that about four times more of that German beverage is being made and consumed than last year. A contemporary is of opinion that this effect is due to two causes—the immense stimulus to the joility of the Germans by the chronic enthusiasm into which their victories at home have thrown them, and the natural growth of the habit of drinking lager among Americans. It is not inclined to mourn over either of these facts, and thinks that as a people it is not to be denied that the that as a people it is not to be denied that the use of light drinks leads us more away from than to the vicious stimulus of spirits.

Dr. Edward Jarvis, the statistician of the General Life Insurance Company of London, furnishes the following statement as showing the deaths of persons who are intemperate, as compared with an equal number of persons of temperate habits. He says that if 100,000 intemperate persons be taken from fifteen to seventy years of age, and an equal number of corresponding ages who are not intemperate, thirty-two of the former will die as often as ten of the latter. Out of 100,000 of each, 16,907 of the intemperate will be dead before fifty years of age, but of those who are not intemperate 4266 only will be dead. From fifty years to sixty the comparative numbers of temperate 4266 only will be dead. From fifty years to sixty the comparative numbers of deaths will be 6418 and 2254, and from sixty years to seventy they will be 45,174 and 33,260. Here is an argument ad rem, which should be much more potential than any prohibitory laws to check the suicidal growth of habits whose first results are thus mathematically whose fatal results are thus mathematically lemonstrated.

Obituary.

LYONS.—Departed this life, in this city, on the fith July, 1871, Thomas Lyons, in the 38th year of his age, a native of Mayo, Ireland, and residen of Charleston for the last 25 years. Seldom has the family circle been visited with Seldom has the family circle been visited with a more heart-rending loss than his, but the wisdom of our Heavenly Father is far beyond our conception, and we must anomit with Christian resignation to His decree. The subject of this brief notice leaves a beloved wife and six small culdren to mourn his untimely death, with numerous relatives and friends. In his demise we miss's good citizen and friend, and his sad and grieved family a beloved husband, father and guardian. His genite and quiet demeanor and unright character sedeered him to all who knew him, and has left behind a name worthy of a true Christian. After a lingering lilness, he has gone to his last home, where the faithfut will be rewarded and happiness reign supreme. Amen.

Summerville; 19th July, 1871. july 22-3* A MISERABLE LIFE IS LED BY the Dyspeptic, for his complaint not only pros trates the body, but produces a gloomy state of mind and an irritable disposition. While many articles are recommended as curatives of this disease, none have met with the success which has attended the use of Dr. JAYNE'S ALTERATIVE. in connection with JAYNE'S SANATIVE PILLS. The Alterative purifies the blood, gives strength to the digestive organs, and imparts a healthy tone to the system; the Sanative Pills change the vitiated secretions of the Stomach and Liver, and stimulate these organs to healthy action. By the combined action of these remedies, many radical cores have been effected, and they are therefore confidently offered to the afflicted. Sold by all july 22-stath3 A PERILOUS SEASON. -GLORI-OUS and delightful as the summer weather is, its tropical heat is a severe trial to the vital pow rs. Even the strongest are sometimes prostra ed by its effects. The common phrase applied to his condition of the body is "general debility." Now, general debility arises from and includes a ected, the bowels are either constipated or too nuch relaxed, the stomach but half performs the ork of digestion, the appetite is poor, and the pirits depressed. This is what is' called general he physical functions, and requires as a remedy medicine that will regulate them all. Hostet er's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted to this ourpose. Its general operation is not confined to single organ. If the liver is affected, it restores ts tone. If the stomach is torpid, it regenerates it. If the nerves are tremulous and weak, it braces and reinforces them. If the mind, which ever sympathizes with the body, is gloomy and despondent, it brings the whole mechanism of the body into harmony with the laws of health. There is no civilized nation in the Western Hemisphere in which the utility of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a tonic, corrective and antiollious medicine is not known and appreciated. Throughout the Tropics it is considered, both by the people and the profession, the standard spe-cific. While it is a medicine for all seasons and all climates, it is especially suited to the complaints generated by the weather, being the purest and best vegetable stimulant in the world. Beware of the Bitters made of acrid and dangerous materials, which unscrupulous parties are name is legion, and the public has no guarante that they are not poisonous. Adhere to the tried temedy, Hestetter's Bitters, sold only in glass and never in kegs or barrels.
